Award winning new method developed for validating aseptic processes

SteriVal, from Helapet, is the first comprehensive test kit to contain everything required to successfully assess and validate a unit's method of aseptic transfer.

For the first time, it will be possible for units to monitor product bioburden levels from stores through two aseptic transfers. Whether used as an annual process validation, to assess new staff and procedure validations, or to highlight any potential areas for improvement, users can submit their results anonymously, to St Mary's Pharmaceutical Unit in Wales, where a national benchmark database is under development.

Developed in conjunction with NHS Wales, the tests are easy to implement and carry out, and offer significant improvements in the quality of prescribing, dispensing or administering medicines (ABPI).
